Nondiscrimination and Special Accommodations. Oklahoma City University School of Law complies with the nondiscrimination provisions of federal law and the nondiscrimination standards of the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools. This includes, but is not limited to, nondiscrimination in admissions, employment, financial aid, and educational services.

In particular, the School of Law provides its students and graduates with equal opportunity to obtain employment without discrimination or segregation on the grounds of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, age, handicap or disability, sexual orientation, or veteran status. In furtherance of this policy, the School of Law communicates to each employer to whom it furnishes assistance and facilities for interviewing and other placement functions the school’s firm expectation that the employer will observe this principle of equal opportunity.

The university’s General Counsel, its Director of Human Resources, and its Vice President for Student Services coordinate the university’s compliance with Titles VI, VII, and IX of the Civil Rights Act, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, Title II of the ADA, and the ADEA.

In the School of Law, the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs is the Vice President for Student Services’ liaison for nondiscrimination and special accommodations. Requests for special accommodations under the ADA are evaluated in the School of Law by the school’s Special Accommodations Committee. Law students who believe they need special accommodations should notify the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs, who can provide further information about procedures for requesting special accommodations. The student will be required to furnish adequate documentation as specified by the committee. The deadlines for requests for special accommodations are given in the Student Disability Services Brochure, available from the law school’s Law Registrar’s Office. Continuing students should be aware that some of the deadlines occur prior to the start of a semester.