Subscriptions: Subscriptions cost $30.00 per volume, payable in advance. Add $5.00 postage for foreign subscriptions. Subscriptions are accepted only on a volume basis for the volume year. If notice of cancellation is not received one-month before the expiration of a subscription, it will be automatically renewed. Notification of changes should include both old and new addresses and should be made two months in advance. Unless a claim is made for nonreceipt of copies within four months of the mailing date, the Oklahoma City University Law Review cannot be held responsible for supplying those issues without charge. All address changes and other requests for subscription information should be sent to okclrev@okcu.edu.

Manuscripts: The Oklahoma City University Law Review invites the submission of unsolicited articles, essays, and reviews concerning all facets of the law and legal problems. Manuscripts should follow the format used in the current issue. The Law Review regrets that it can return only those manuscripts for which it receives a self-addressed envelope and postage and handling fees. The Law Review prefers submission of manuscripts via e-mail or ExpressO. In keeping with recent trends in legal scholarship, the Law Review seeks to bring insights from the humanities and social sciences to law. It also publishes works on developments in Oklahoma law. The Law Review is edited and managed by a student board of editors in conjunction with a faculty advisor and an editorial advisory board.

Disclaimer: The Oklahoma City University Law Review seeks to provide general information regarding subjects of interest to the legal community. The views and opinions expressed by any author are solely those of the author and do not necessarily reflect the views and opinions of Oklahoma City University, the Oklahoma City University School of Law, or the Oklahoma City University Law Review.

Copyright: Copyright 2017 by Oklahoma City University. Except where otherwise expressly provided, the author of each article, note, comment, and review in this issue granted permission for copies of that manuscript to be duplicated for educational and classroom use, provided that: (1) each copy is distributed at or below cost; (2) the author and the Oklahoma City University Law Review are identified; (3) proper notice of copyright is affixed to each copy; and (4) the Oklahoma City University Law Review is notified of the use.

Production: Except where common sense dictates otherwise, the footnotes and text in the Oklahoma City University Law Review conform to the twentieth edition of The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation. The Oklahoma City University Law Review also relies on the grammatical guidelines in the third edition of The Redbook: A Manual of Legal Citation and the sixteenth edition of The Chicago Manual of Style. The Law Review embraces public-domain citations for state cases and statutes, and it has adopted Perma.cc as its official archival tool for web-based sources. The Oklahoma City University Law Review is printed by Joe Christensen, Inc. in Lincoln, Nebraska.
